

Champ's Lemonade Stand Adventure

It was a sunny Saturday, and Champ had an idea: “I think I’m going to open a lemonade stand!” He grabbed the supplies he thought he would need.

A pitcher, some lemons and water, a spoon to stir it all, a pencil and paper, and his little blue wagon to carry everything.

But when Champ got to the corner park, things didn’t go as planned. His first batch of lemonade was way too sour, his paper sign fell over, and no one was stopping by to purchase any of his lemonade.

“Maybe I’m not cut out for this” he sighed. But just then, a group of kids stopped by. “Is this lemonade?” one asked. Champ perked up and said “It will be! Give me a few minutes.”

He raced home to rework his recipe and added some new ingredients. Champ also found a sturdier sign and painted the word “Lemonade” on it.

When he got back, the kids were still there. They sipped his new recipe. “This is amazing!”

When it was almost dinner time, Champ had sold out and made $32.00!

That night, Champ was getting ready for bed. He opened his journal and wrote:

“Lesson learned. It’s okay to mess up. What matters is trying again.”
